Pettsburgh, Pa., January 4, 1919

My Dear General Persking:

While you were leading our gallant army to victory in the old world ten Thousand Western Pennsylvanians, inspired by their devation to country, their innate love of liberty and your fine leadership, contributed to the War Savings law and envalled limit allowed by bers of the Pershing himit Clarb, which is today one of the most potential in america.

They are proud to be associated in one great body under your name, and they may fittingly great and honor your upon your return to the land for motives you have led her bravest pons to the greatest of the world's great victories.

I have the honor to remain

To General John & Perching. Yours Very Sincerely James Francis Burkan Director of War Savings This Volume No. 6064

FOREWORD

WHEN the United States entered the war one of its vital necessities was to secure funds for its successful prosecution.

To bring about the most wide-spread and universal method through which the patriotic people of the Nation could contribute in large and small amounts, the government inaugurated the National War Savings movement, placing the limit of one thousand dollars upon the amount which any individual American could subscribe.

In the list of those who promptly and patriotically "went the limit" in the various war activities, the members of the only Pershing Limit Club in America, whose names are included in this volume, were among the real leaders.

In addition to subscribing the money limit allowed by law, the government authorities gratefully acknowledge the fact that the members of this organization contributed in many other ways to the successful prosecution of the war. It is, therefore, a real
